QUALIFICATIONS

For most entry-level positions, applicants should have at least a high school diploma or GED. A college degree in accounting, finance, business, communications, economics, marketing or computer science will assist the job applicant not only when initially hired, but also when seeking promotions within the banking industry.

Most banks offer on-the-job training and encourage you to further your education through a variety of courses, seminars and training programs. Banks often set up tuition assistance and reimbursement programs for job-related coursework to help employees increase their capabilities for current and future positions. Many large banks have training departments dedicated to helping employees maximize their skills and talents through in-bank educational programs.
